Santa Barbara County WatchList By Callie Bowdish

“The message is clear: we must harness the energy of individuals and groups to work together to protect birds, their habitats, and other wildlife for the enjoyment and benefit of ourselves and our children.”

Audubon California WatchList (ca.audubon.org/ca_watchlist.php)

One important tool for protecting birds is keeping track of how they are doing. Lists that include ranking criteria such as population size, range size, threats, and population trends are used in making wildlife protection decisions. The California Department of Fish and Game uses the State and Federally Listed Endangered and Threatened Animals of California, May 2008 (<http://www.dfg.ca.gov/biogeodata/cnddb/pdfs/TEAnimals.pdf>). This is a list of the animals found within or off the coast of California that have been classified as endangered or threatened by the California Fish and Game Commission (state list) and by the U. S. Secretary of the Interior or the U. S. Secretary of Commerce (federal list). Audubon California has the WatchList.

Another list is included in Bird Species of Special Concern, a Ranked Assessment of Species, Subspecies and Distinct Populations of Birds of Immediate Conservation Concern in California, edited by W. David Shuford and Thomas Gardali (Studies of Western Birds No. 1), 2008. It is published by the Western Field Ornithologists and the California Department of Fish and Game. Some Audubon members may find this book too scientific to read, but it is a helpful resource for those involved with monitoring and protecting birdlife. The book shows how important it is to protect and improve places (habitat restoration) that birds depend on and ranks birds in California that are not already on the state endangered and threatened list. It mentions that there was “the important limitation to available biological data and uncertainty as to how these limitations affected our results.” Audubon is a leader in helping with getting bird data to scientists, but there is still a need for more data. Audubon California and PRBO Conservation Science are encouraging the use of California eBird, which is an online program designed to help us learn more about California birds by reporting observations.

Santa Barbara County has its own species list of birds found within its borders: the Santa Barbara County Bird List (mysite.verizon.net/res0d1yq/countychecklist.htm). This list puts stars next to birds known to breed in the county. It is a handy list and is used for the Santa Barbara Christmas Bird Count. Audubon’s Christmas Bird Count is a staple for scientists doing bird research. Approximately 96 of the species on the Santa Barbara County list of 482 can be found on at least one or more of the ranked lists. In some cases the criteria for the lists involve whether the bird is breeding. Many of Santa Barbara County birders take special note on the “what, when and where” of nesting birds. Some of the species listed are subspecies, such as those found on the Channel Islands.

The following abbreviated Santa Barbara County WatchList contains all of the species found in Santa Barbara County that are included in the state and federally endangered and threatened animal lists, Bird Species of Special Concern “priority 1”, and the Audubon California WatchList red category, as well as four red category species from the National Audubon WatchList. The complete list (www.rain.org/~audubon/SBWatchList.htm) shows that approximately 20 percent of the birds within Santa Barbara County need special help and monitoring.

The S. B. County WatchList of 96 species identifies birds that need our help. Audubon is an advocate for the protection of wetlands and other areas important to birds’ survival. SBAS works with coalitions and legislators to support public policies that minimize threats such as oil spills and habitat loss. Audubon acts to secure funding for habitat restoration and other bird conservation efforts. “Only citizen action can fuel the changes that will improve the outlook for WatchList species.” (National Audubon WatchList (web1.audubon.org/science/species/watchlist/))

Election of Audubon Board of Directors 2008-09
July 26th (at the picnic)

Note the slate for the chapter board of directors for one year terms, to be elected at the Annual Members’ Picnic, July 26. We have several openings on the board: Science, Education, Publicity, and Newsletter. Andy Lentz will continue as editor of our newsletter, El Tecolote, but prefers not to be on the board. So the Newsletter Chair assists with coordinating the lead articles, and other chapter projects based on interest and time. We have job descriptions or information about what each position entails, if you would like to contribute to bird conservation and education. Contact Darlene Chirman at dchirman@starband.net or 692-2008, or any board member, to find out more. The board meets monthly, on the second Wednesday evening, at the Goleta Valley Community Center. We’d love to have you join us!

Kenya: Birds & Wildlife in the Gem of East Africa

Roy Poucher
Wednesday, June 25, 2008

Come along on a photographic safari to Kenya with Roy Poucher and Bird Odysseys, getting up close and personal with its flashy birds, charismatic large mammals, and breathtaking landscapes. Your visual tour will transport you via stunning photography to the vast grasslands of the Serengeti and other wild locales. View life's dramas lived out by colorful and comical-looking birds and by the big game of hippos, rhinos, zebras, elephants, giraffes and lions. Grasp the mind-boggling millions of Lesser Flamingoes blanketing Lake Nakuru in pink.

Enjoy the antics of the gangly Secretary Bird and of the largest flying bird in the world, the Kori Bustard, as it displays for females. Fish Eagles capture their dinner before your eyes, and weavers construct their nests. Warthogs, Cape buffalo, elephants and hippos gently tend to their young close to your safari van. Visit beautiful and bird-rich Lakes Baringo and Naivasha in the Great Rift Valley. Journey to the verdant and biologically diverse Kakamega Forest, and witness the famous Treetops Lodge, built above big game watering holes in Aberdare National Park. The current political and social upheavals will be briefly addressed also.

Roy Poucher is an international tour leader and, with his company Bird Odysseys, has led trips to Costa Rica, Ecuador, the Galapagos Islands and Kenya. He just returned from touring Cambodia and Thailand. He also leads trips for Sea & Sage Audubon and has led their trips to North Dakota, the Great Lakes, southeast Arizona, and Texas. Trips to India and Australia are in the works.
